Fontana Medical Center

The Program

As a leading hospital in the Inland Empire, Kaiser Permanente Fontana Medical Center enables residents to train in a highly supportive environment that fosters the highest standards of care in the Southern California area. The goal of our residency program is to train residents to be compassionate, skilled clinicians that can be successful in any of the disciplines that are available to successful internists. In addition to gaining important clinical skills and knowledge, our residents have the advantage of learning within a healthcare system that excels in delivering top quality care.

Our 3-year residency program offers a first-rate academic medical education within a tertiary care setting. The hospital and adjacent clinical offices in Fontana and Ontario are regarded as the major referral center for the entire Inland Empire.

Kaiser Permanente offers an unparalleled diversity of patients spanning from primary care to complex tertiary cases, with the ethnic diversity found in a rapidly growing area of Southern California.

The Internal Medicine Training Program at Fontana is designed to provide broad-based clinical training with an emphasis on patient-centered team-based medicine. Residents enjoy an optimal balance of inpatient and ambulatory medicine. During their ambulatory rotations residents build skills in outpatient diagnosis and treatment while managing diverse continuity practices. Residents on inpatient rotations progress through graded responsibilities, with interns providing much of the direct patient care, and senior residents assuming increased responsibility for teaching, supervision and mastery of medical knowledge.

Our graduates have progressed to careers in primary care, hospitalist medicine or fellowship training (Inclusive of Cardiology, Endocrinology, ID, Rheumatology, Sleep Medicine, and Genetics). Kaiser Permanente senior residents have been very marketable and highly recruited upon graduation by universities, private practices, and Kaiser Permanente.
